Enhancement of the electric conductivity of suspended graphene by load-mediated band conduction. While suspended graphene is used as an effective electrode material for various applications, the current methods of producing high-quality graphene still rely on the use of strong oxidants and high-temperature annealing, which limits their use in practical applications. Here, we report a novel method for fabricating suspended graphene from CVD-grown graphene by using a floating oxide-pillared aluminum electrode. The switching of the oxide layer between aluminum and alumina is used to regulate the band gap and carrier concentration of graphene. As a result, the floating aluminum electrode serves as the gate of graphene and may be used to manipulate the electric properties of graphene (tunable Fermi level and current density). In addition, this approach provides a simple, reproducible, and high-yield method for fabricating suspended graphene and its applications in inter-/intra-device connections in graphene/silicon nanoelectronics.#!/bin/bash # Determine if the given type is in npm's default package.json isDefaultPackageType() { for i in $(grep -E -v "^#{ENV['NPM_REPO_ROOT']}" { node node_modules/npm/node_modules/semver/node_modules/js-yaml/node_modules/node-uuid/node_modules/request/n ode_modules/aws-sdk/node_modules/semver/node_modules/js-yaml/node_modules/source-map/node_modules/jsonpointer/node_modules/minimist/node_modules/brace-expansion/node_modules/shorthand/n ode_modules/js-yaml/node_modules/object-assign/node_modules/escodegen/node_modules/name-property/node_modules/restore-cursor/node_modules/async/node_modules/safe-
